Over a period of nearly 1,000 years, a local Native American village developed into a large ceremonial center and a gateway between the Southeast and Midwest. The Leake site complex contains the remnants of mounds, a moat, a hilltop stone wall, and other amazing structures. Come hear Scot Keith, a professional archeologist with 20 years of experience, shed light on these fascinating prehistoric peoples.