Site Destruction

Pieces of Our Past Lost Forever

Georgia Archaeology Month
May 2014

Buried beneath our feet is a complex and multidimensional puzzle. Each piece is an irreplaceable clue about the lives of people in the past who once called this land their home. The pieces of this puzzle are fragile and once destroyed are forever lost. Archaeology enables us to learn about this hidden past, and our lives will be enriched by a better understanding of that heritage.

—abstracted from “Jekyll Island’s Hidden Past” by Ray Crook